Changing the Rules

Question	Example answer
State the Rule in your own words.	Unless I get it right, I will never get anywhere in life.
My old Rule is:
Summarise the ways in which your old Rule has affected you.	I have always felt inadequate, not good enough. This has made me work tremendously hard, to the extent that I have been constantly under pressure, tense and stressed. This has affected my relationships. I have not had enough time for people, and I have lost out because of it. At times, it has made me quite ill.
This Rule has had the following impact on my life:
	And I have sometimes run away from opportunities because I didn't think I would measure up.
Note the clues that tell you your old Rule is active (thoughts, feelings, body sensations, patterns of behaviour).	I get anxious about failing and put myself under more and more pressure. I go over the top in how I go about things —try to dot every 'i' and cross every 't'. I feel sick with anxiety. And if I think I've broken the Rule, I become very self- critical, get depressed, and give up altogether.
I know that the Rule is in operation because:
Summarise the experiences which led to the development of the Rule and have reinforced it.	When I was young, my father's disappointment with how his life has turned out made him very keen that we should all make the most of ourselves. Instead of encouraging and praising us, he gave us all the message that we were not up to it if we did not perform the way he wanted us to. That message sank in, and I have tried to compensate by being a perfectionist.
It is understandable that I have this Rule because:

Summarise the ways in which your Rule does not fit the way the world works or asks more of you than can reasonably be asked of any normal, imperfect human being.

It simply is not humanly possible to get it right all the time. Making mistakes and getting things wrong are all part of learning and growth.

However, the Rule is unreasonable, because:

Summarise the advantages of obeying the Rule and the risks of letting it go. Check to see if these are more apparent than real Sometimes I do really good work, and get praise for it. This is partly why I have done so well in my career. People respect me. When I do get it right, I feel great.

The payoffs of obeying the Rule are:

Summarise the harmful side effects of obeying the Rule

But the disadvantages are:

I am constantly tense. Sometimes my work is not as good as it could be, because I get in such a state about it. I can't learn from my mistakes, because they upset me so much, nor can I learn from constructive criticism. When things do not work out, I feel dreadful and it takes me ages to get over it. I avoid anything that I might not be able to get right, and miss all kinds of opportunities because of that.

People may respect me, but it keeps them at a distance. They see me as a bit inhuman, unapproachable — even arrogant. The pressure I place on myself is bad for my health. Plus all my time and attention goes on my work — I don't allow myself to relax or do things I enjoy. In short, the Rule leads to stress, misery and fear on all fronts

Conclusion
Weigh up the Pros and cons and write your conclusions about how 'helpful' your Rule is to you:

Write out your new Rule, in your own words

A more realistic and helpful Rule would be:

Good enough is good enough — I don't have to be great, to be great. I enjoy doing well — there's nothing wrong with that. But I'm only human and I will get it wrong sometimes. Getting it wrong is the route to growth.